LAMENTING LORD NELSON'S DEATH

1) A TRAVELLER [HUGMAN, John]. Original poems, in the moral, heroic, pathetic, and other styles.

8vo. [2], 42pp. Original publisher's buff paper boards, printed paper lettering-piece to upper board. Rubbed and dulled, loss to head and foot of spine. Internally clean and crisp.

A provincially published collection of verse, in original state, by Suffolk artist John Hugman (bap. 1770, d. 1846), including topical poems from the time of the Napoleonic Wars: 'On the greatness and fall of Buonaparte. As recited by the Author at a public dinner, April 18, 1814' and 'Monody on the death of the ever to be lamented Lord Nelson, Recited by the Author at a Public Dinner'. A seventeenth edition appeared by 1835.

All editions are scarce. COPAC and OCLC record a single copy of this eighth edition (BL).

Not in Jackson.

ADMIRING NELSON IN AMERICA

2) AN OFFICER. The life and actions of that distinguished naval hero, admiral nelson; who fell in the battle of trafalgar, october 21 1805.

Hudson [New York]. Published by William E. Norman, 1808.

70pp. With a wood engraved portrait frontispiece.

[Bound with:] Life of napoleon bonaparte, emperor of the french, king of italy, and protector of the rhenish confederation, from his birth to the present time. Hudson [New York]. Published by William E. Norman, 1810. 108pp. With a wood engraved frontispiece.

12mo. Contemporary red half-roan, buff paper boards, ruled and lettered in gilt to spine. Extremities worn and marked, spine cracked, with loss at head and foot. Recent bookplate of Norfolk-based amateur historian, and inaugural member of the Nelson Society, Ron Charles Fiske to FEP, stab-stitch holes to gutter, minute marginal worm-tracks, some staining, scattered spotting.

An apt paring of scarce early American imprints of succinct anonymous biographies of Lord Nelson and Napoleon Bonaparte; given the small format likely intended for a juvenile audience.

OCLC and COPAC together record copies of the first mentioned work at four locations (AAS, Cambridge, Michigan, and Temple).

THE LIFE

RICHARD EARL HOWE, K.G.,

ADMIRAL OF THE FLEET, AND GENERAL OF MARINES.

BY

SIR JOHN BARROW, BART., F.R.S.

LONDON:

JOHN MURRAY, ALBEMARLE STREET.

MDCCLXXXVIII.

3) BARROW, Sir John. The life of richard earl howe, k.g., admiral of the fleet, and general of marines.

London. John Murray, 1838. First edition.

8vo. xvi, 432. With an engraved portrait frontispiece and two folding plates. Contemporary blue half-morocco, brown cloth boards, tooled and lettered in gilt, marbled edges. Rubbed, a trifle marked, spine dulled. Marbled endpapers, plates spotted.

The first edition of writer and artic exploration promotor Sir John Barrow's (1764-1848) biography of naval officer Richard Howe, Earl Howe (1726-1799). Howe forged an esteemed career with the Royal Navy, serving with distinction during the Seven Years' War, rising to the position of commander-in-chief of the fleet during the American War of Independence, and ultimately being appointed first lord of the Admiralty.

feet, as they were Moored near the Mouth of the Nile, and which Lord Nelson formed his Attack on them on the ble 1st. of August 1798.
penson Low, Printer. Published by R. Dodd, February 20th, 1799.

The second located copy of a striking promotional broadside documenting the position of the French fleet prior to the Battle of the Nile, published, five months after the event, by Robert Dodd as 'an accompaniment to his Four Historical Plates of that Glorious Victory'.

Marine painter and engraver Robert Dodd (1748-1815) began his career as a landscape painter. Though he achieved some recognition, he found true success as a painter of marine scenes, rising to become one of the foremost recorders of maritime actions of the French Revolution and the American War of Independence. From 1783 he himself engraved and published over 100 aquatints of his work, including views of the naval dockyards, and sets of engravings of Trafalgar and the Battle of the Nile. The latter are advertised here, with succinct descriptions for the four aquatints available for purchase, each of which depicted an aspect of the battle as it progressed; the initial attack at sunse; the burning of the French Admiral's ship the Bellerophon; the explosion, at midnight, of the same vessel; and the state of the battle the ensuing morning, showing the dismasted enemy ships.

5) CHURCHILL, T. O. The life of lord viscount nelson, duke of bronté, &c.

London. Printed by Harrison and Rutter, 1810. Second edition.

Quarto. vii, [1], 94pp. With an engraved portrait frontispiece, a further 13 engraved plates, and a tipped-in facsimile of a Nelson letter. Single leaf broadside: 'Ode, By Henry James Pye, Esq. P. L. Performed at St. James's, January, 18, 1806, on the Anniversary of Her Majesty's Birth Day' bound at rear. Contemporary gilt-tooled half-calf, marbled boards. Wear to foot of lower joint. Marbled endpapers, armorial bookplate of Justice of the Peace in Unsted Wood, and sometime High Sheriff of Surrey, Hutches Trower (1777-1835) to FEP.

The first edition of this work was published in 1808 and became an immediate success with the British public. It is notable for the inclusion for the first time of a facsimile letter by Nelson (29th January, 1798).

6) COLLINGWOOD, Adam. Anecdotes of the late lord viscount nelson...

London. Printed by W. Stratford, 1806. First edition.

12mo. iv, 148pp. With an engraved frontispiece, and additional engraved title page, and three further engraved plates. Contemporary gilt-ruled half-calf, marbled boards. Heavily rubbed, joints starting. Recent bookplate and pencil notes of Norfolk-based amateur historian, and inaugural member of the Nelson Society, Ron Charles Fiske of FEP, scattered spotting.

The sole edition of a scarce compilation of anecdotes documenting the naval career of Lord Horatio Nelson; in particular his victories during the French Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars - most notably the Battle of Trafalgar where he was to lose his life. The work is appended by a detailed account of the funeral ceremonies and a selection of poems commemorating his achievements by authors including Weeden Butler and Henry James Pye, the poet laureate. The account of the Battle of the Nile is taken word for word from Captain Edward Berry's (1768-1831) description. Little is known of the author, Adam Collingwood, a name perhaps supplied by the publisher in order to evoke Nelson's renowned friend and comrade, Admiral Cuthbert Collingwood.

CELEBRATING TRAFALGAR IN DORSET

- 7) CROOK, John. A sermon preached at charmouth, December 5, 1805, being the day appointed for A National Thanksgiving on account of the late glorious victory, off cape trafalgar.
Sherborne. Published by Request. Printed by J. Langdon, [1805?] First edition.

8vo. 24pp. Disbound. Early ink gift inscription to head of dust-soiled title page.

The second located copy of provincially published sermon celebrating the victory of the Royal Navy at the Battle of Trafalgar: 'Their numbers both in ships and men, were far superior to ours; yet notwithstanding an evidently great disproportion, a most glorious victory ensues; a victory indeed! in some respects never equalled in the annals of naval history: an entire discomfiture of (at least) the flower and principal part of the enemy's fleet.'

- 8) [DESTROYERS]. The "town" class destroyers: the story of the "four-stackers"...
[Bath]. [H. Sharp & Sons], [1949]. First edition.

Quarto. 107pp, [1]. With fifty mounted photographs. Bound for presentation in contemporary navy half-morocco, blue cloth boards, gilt lettering and nautical motifs to spine, T.E.G. Lightly rubbed and marked. Marbled endpapers, internally clean and crisp. Presentation plate to FEP: 'Presented by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to the citizens of Castleton in grateful recollection of the services to the allied cause in the Second World War of the destroyer bearing that name'. T.L.S. dated 25th July, 1950 pasted to recto of FEP; addressed by British Consul General C. E. Whitmore to an unnamed Castleton civic servant, offering to confer the book (and a brass badge of the H.M.S. Castleton) at an official presentation. Blind-stamp to front blank fly-leaf of educator, amateur historian, and sometime resident of Castleton (where he graduated Teachers College in 1957), Douglas Ronald Monmaney (1934-2006).

The records of service of the fifty destroyers transferred from the United States Navy to the Royal Navy or Royal Canadian Navy in September, 1940 - each bearing the name of a North American town.

Admiralty,
London, England.
June 1949.

BRITISH CONSULATE GENERAL,
BOSTON.

25th July, 1950.

Dear Sir,

In September 1940 when Great Britain was hard pressed by a powerful and ruthless enemy the Government and people of the United States handed over to the British Government fifty destroyers and, in return, received eight new naval and air bases from Newfoundland in the North to British Guiana in the South.

My government were most grateful for these destroyers which did magnificent work in keeping open the sea-lanes and making the Atlantic Ocean a buffer against, and not a highway for, hostile forces.

On joining the Royal Navy these ships were given names of towns and cities common to both the United States and Great Britain. For instance one of these ships was named His Majesty's Ship CASTLETON after Castleton in Vermont and Castleton in England.

The Admiralty in London wish to present, as tokens of the gratitude of the British Government and people, the badge (in brass) of the ship bearing the name H.M.S. CASTLETON and a commemorative book.

I should be grateful if you, as head of the civic authorities in Castleton would inform me if such a gift would be agreeable to your town. If so, I shall be happy to visit Castleton and make the presentation officially. So soon as I know whether you wish to accept I will write again and suggest a date and time for the presentation.

Yours very truly,

C. E. Whitmore

C. E. Whitmore
British Consul General.

The Chairman of the Board of Selectmen,
CASTLETON,
Vermont.

H.M.S. Castleton saw active duty in the North Atlantic as a convoy escort. In November 1940 she picked up all the survivors of two torpedoed steamships, Daydawn and Victoria. On 20th August 1942 she and H.M.S. Newark captured 51 survivors of the German submarine U-464 who had taken refuge in an Icelandic trawler. She was reduced to reserve at Grangemouth, Scotland, in 1945 and sold for scrap in 1947.

There is seemingly no record of how many copies were issued, nor indeed if one was distributed to each of the fifty towns associated with a destroyer.

OCLC records copies at six locations (Canadian Museum of History, Florida, Land Public Library, Navy Department, Rowan Public Library, and Victoria); COPAC adds no further.

PATRIOTIC BROADSIDE

- 10) [FRENCH INVASION]. A pitiful ballad, of english defeats & french victories, showing how englishmen ought to stand still and suffer themselves to be beaten, after the example of their cowardly forefathers.

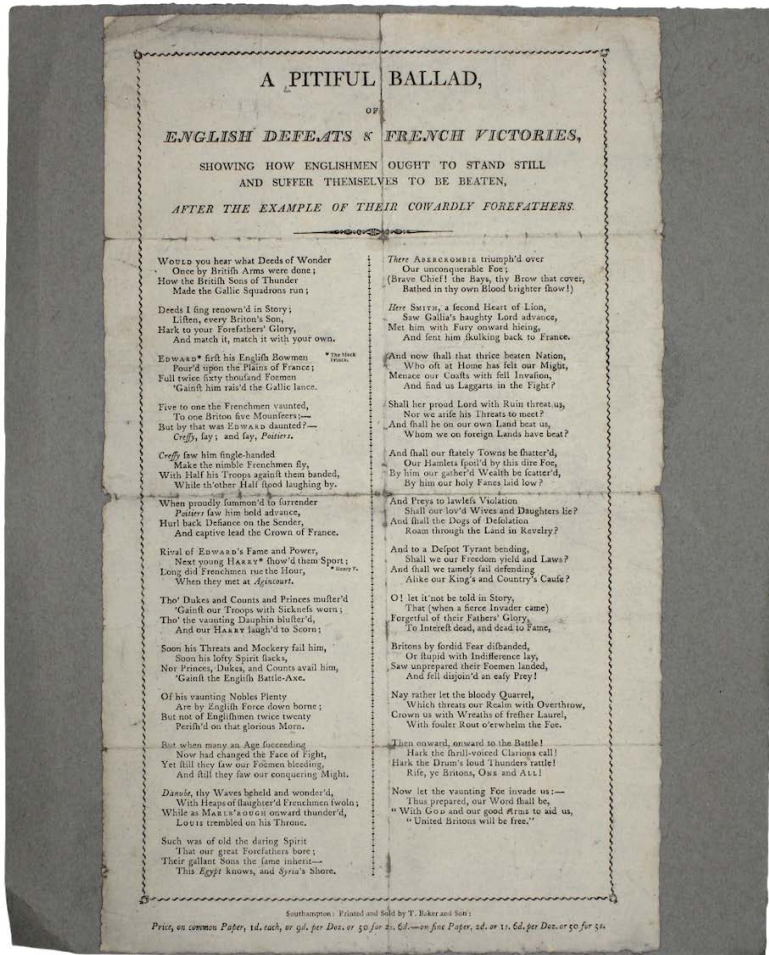

Southampton. Printed and Sold by T. Baker and Son, [s.d., c. 1804].

Dimensions: 190 x 320 mm, Mount: 260 x 324.
Single leaf broadside. Mounted on modern grey card.
Several old folds, with slight loss.

The second located copy of an early nineteenth century broadside ballad comprised of patriotic verses on a threatened French invasion at the height of the Napoleonic Wars; with reference to past engagements between the opposing forces of England and France, including the landing of the British expeditionary force in Egypt in an effort to eject the remnants of Napoleon's army from the region.

The usual databases record a single copy (Southampton).

Sir,

Feeling it a Duty that every information should be placed before the Public in the great question which is at present agitating Minis minds in England with respect to Steam Communication with New South Wales - & New Zealand - & having lately read in the Public Prints some very excellent letters on that subject - more especially one from Capt<sup>t</sup> Fitz Roy of the Royal Navy in the "Times" of the 12th of Sept<sup>r</sup> last - I am induced to send you a few remarks of my own, if you deem them deserving of notice -

I should not thus have entered upon the subject, had I not considered myself competent to do so by an experience of many years in all parts of the Globe, & by having lately commanded for a lengthened period the Fast Man of War Steam Ship that was ever sent into the Pacific Ocean via Cape Horn -

The principal point, I presume, to be discussed in this question, is the attainment of the most rapid and

LEADING TO THE WAR OF 1812

14) [MARITIME LAW]. The orders of council, and instructions for imposing the restrictions of Blockade; and for regulating The Navigation of the Sea, and the importation and exportation of merchandize, in consequence thereof; with a brief view of the several provisions therein contained.

London. Printed by D. N. Shury, 1808. First edition.

8vo. 51pp, [1]. Stitched, as issued, in original publisher's powder blue wrappers. A trifle rubbed and creased.

A crisp copy, in original state, of the terms of the orders of council preventing neutral shipping trading with Continental Europe during the continuing hostilities of the Napoleonic Wars. By 1807 the conflict between England and France had degenerated into a war of economic retribution, as each side attempted to starve the other into submission. Nelson's victory at Trafalgar in October 1805 had given Britain mastery of the seas, but Napoleon still controlled much of continental Europe. Lacking a fleet that could directly threaten Britain, Napoleon implemented the Continental System, a pair of decrees (November 21, 1806, and December 17, 1807) that prohibited British trade with the Continent and threatened seizure of any neutral vessels found trading with England. The British responded by issuing the present orders of council (November 11, 18, and 25 and December 18, 1807) that imposed a counter-blockade on Napoleonic Europe, requiring non-partisan vessels to call at a British port for inspection and to pay duties and seek licenses there for trade with the enemy. In the midst of that economic vice was the neutral United States. The British embargo severely impeded American commercial activity in the Atlantic, and was ultimately a primary factor in the commencement of the Anglo-American War of 1812.

8vo. In 12 volumes, Original publisher's blind-stamped dark green cloth, gilt. Extremities very lightly rubbed, spines a trifle sunned, top-edges dust-soiled. Contemporary armorial bookplates of James Whatman to all FEPs, recent bookplate of Robert J. Hayhurst to recto of FFEP of Vol. I, very occasional slight chipping to margins, lightly spotted.

A well-preserved complete set of John Marshall's (1784?-1837) authoritative history of notable Royal Navy servicemen; his only published work. An unpretentious work, with no aspirations towards literary merit, this collection of biographies benefits greatly from the inclusion of copies of official or private letters, and other documents, making it of value to scholars of eighteenth-century maritime history. Evidently, many of the lives were contributed by the officers themselves, thus events are on occasion described in too favourable a manner; for his part Marshall does not pass critical judgement on the conduct he observes. Marshall himself served with the Royal Navy during the French Revolutionary and Napoleonic wars in numerous support vessels. He was promoted to the rank of lieutenant in 1815, at the conclusion of the latter conflict, but thereafter ceased to serve.

A rare pamphlet defence of the honour, behaviour and deportment of Admiral Lord Nelson by his nephew George Nelson Matcham (1789-1877), English lawyer and antiquary, the eldest son of George Matcham and Catherine Nelson, Horatio's sister. It was provoked by the publication of excerpts from a journal of Melasina Trench, or Mrs St. George (published in the London Times during October 1861) which recorded a drunken and uncouth Nelson. Matcham's defence includes a rather touching description of the uncle he visited 'twice during the short periods in which he was on shore...once in 1802....and the second time at his house at Merton, in 1805, for three weeks preceding the 13th of September, when he left that place to embark at Portsmouth to return no more'.

17) [MATCHAM, George Nelson]. [A manuscript account of the life of Admiral Lord Nelson].

Quarto. Manuscript on paper. [22]p of text, the remaining [22] blank. Contemporary marbled paper wrappers. Extremities lightly rubbed and creased. Very occasional light spotting.

A series of manuscript notes on the naval career of Admiral Lord Nelson in the hand of his nephew George Nelson Matcham (1789-1877), lawyer and antiquary, the eldest son of George Matcham and Catherine Nelson, Horatio's sister.

Matcham provides succinct records of his uncle's principle commands, rewards, and honours, and lines on his character, popularity, and hatred of the French. He makes occasional references to the pages of a frustratingly unidentified book, from which he evidently derived information for this account. In addition, there are entries relating to the history of the Matcham estates at Hampworth, Woodfalls, and Newhouse. The latest date recorded in the manuscript in 1813.

[See item 16 for Matcham's memoirs of Nelson].

BULLETIN

FROM THE

LONDON GAZETTE of MARCH 2d, 1793.

Cagliari, January 25, 1793.

ON the 21st Instant, a French Ship of the Line and a Bomb Ketch appeared before the Island of St. Peter, which was immediately surrendered to the French, the Commandant having previously retired to this Place with a Detachment of 800 Men, and such Provisions as they could bring with them, and spiked the Cannon they left behind. The French have also taken the Island of Antioch.

Yesterday the French Fleet, consisting of Nineteen Ships of the Line, anchored in this Harbour. The Admiral sent a Detachment of Twenty Men on Shore, with the National Flag, and an Officer, who demanded the Surrender of the Place; but the Lieutenant of the Port cautioned them not to advance; and when they arrived near the Pratick-Houfe, the Sardes killed the Drummer and Sixteen others; the Rest retreated to the Ship. It is expected that the Town will be bombarded this Morning.

Munich, February 17, 1793.

ACCOUNTS are just received of the Duke of Deuxpont's very narrow Escape from an Army of 3000 French, who have taken Possession of his Residence.

BULLETIN

FROM THE

LONDON GAZETTE of MARCH 16th, 1805.

No. I.

Whitehall, March 14, 1805.

THE following intelligence has been received at the East India House:

AFTER the capture of Hinglaiz-Ghur by the Detachment under the command of the Honorable Lieutenant-Colonel Monson, as stated in the Calcutta Gazette of the 26th of July, Lieutenant-Colonel Monson advanced his position about fifty miles from the Mokundra Pass, in which position he was informed that he would be able to procure supplies. Colonel Monson also expected to be able to communicate with Colonel Murray, at that time on his march, with a considerable detachment of Troops, from Guzerat towards Oujein.

The Corps under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Monson consisted of five battalions of Sepoys, with a proportion of Artillery, and of two bodies of irregular Horse, under the command of Lieutenant Lucan, and of a Native Chieftain, named Bapojee Scindiah, amounting to about three thousand men.

On the 7th July, 1804, Lieutenant-Colonel Monson received intelligence that Jeswunt Rao Holkar,

AN EARLY ACCOUNT OF TRAFALGAR

20) [NAPOLEONIC WARS]. Bulletins of the campaign, 1805.
[London]. [s.n.], [1805].

8vo. 203pp, [1]. Contemporary gilt-tooled half-calf, marbled boards, contrasting black calf lettering-piece. Lightly rubbed. Internally clean and crisp.

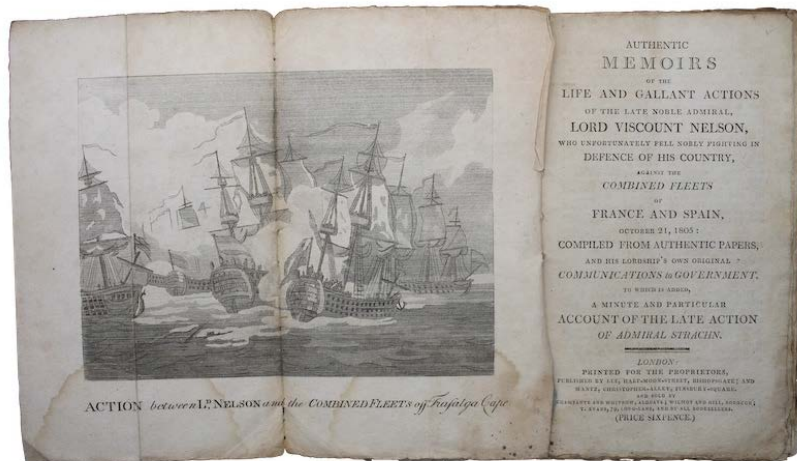

A selection of monthly accounts, extracted from the London Gazette, concerning the British military campaigns of the Napoleonic Wars for the year 1805. Comprising letters and dispatches of both the army and navy, these bulletins relate foreign actions, victories, defeats, and casualties. This edition includes the dispatches of Vice-Admiral Collingwood, relating the victory at Battle of Trafalgar and the 'ever-to-be-lamented death of Vice-Admiral Lord Viscount Nelson', not published in the Gazette until 6th November.

- 21) [NELSON, Admiral Lord]. Authentic memoirs of the life and gallant actions of the late noble admiral, lord viscount nelson, who unfortunately fell nobly fighting in defence of his country, against the combined fleets of france and spain, october 21, 1805: compiled from authentic papers, and his lordship's own original communications to government. To which is added, a minute and particular account of the late action of admiral strachn.

London. Printed for the Proprietors, published by Lee...and Mantz, [s.d., 1805?]. First edition.

12mo. 36pp. With an engraved folding frontispiece. Uncut, stitched, as issued, into original publisher's powder blue wrappers. Housed in recent custom gate-fold navy cloth case. Substantial loss to wrappers. Light tide-mark to foot of frontispiece, title a trifle dusty, scattered foxing.

A remarkably rare survival, in original unsophisticated state, of an anonymous early biography of Nelson, primarily devoted to his victory at Trafalgar. Though frustratingly undated, it would appear that the present pamphlet is one of the earliest published accounts of the Battle of Trafalgar. The work reprints an extract from Admiral Richard Strachan's (1760-1828), account of his capture of enemy vessels off the coast of Cadiz, initially published in the Gazette Extraordinary on the 11th November, 1805. A printed publisher's statement to the verso of the title page reads as follows: 'This Pamphlet would have been issued from the press on Saturday last, 9th, but the delay was in order to render it more perfect, as the rumour of another Victory was circulated in all parts. We have this morning been enabled, by the publication of the Extraordinary Gazette, to finish with another happy instance of British naval superiority. There remains nothing to add here, but that the greatest care has been taken to render the dates exact, extracting the materials from the most respectable publications of the day'.

COPAC records a single copy (Cambridge); OCLC adds no further. A 'fourth edition', also presumed to have been printed in 1805, is recorded at Manchester; no further editions appear extant.

SUNG TO THE TUNE OF RULE BRITANNIA

- 22) [NELSON, Admiral Lord]. Lines composed since the death of Lord Nelson, Sung to the Tune of Rule Britannia.

[s.i.]. [s.n., s.d., c.1821].

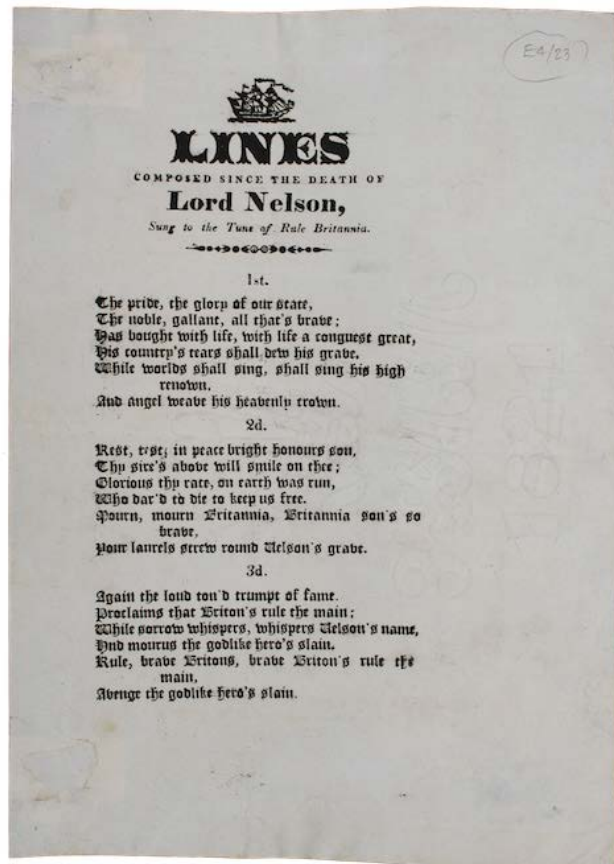

Single leaf slip-song, dimensions: 220 x 160mm. Printed, the text in black letter, on paper watermarked 1821 (beneath a fleur-de-lys and the initials FC&McM). Neat repairs to verso, making good margins where evidently removed from an album

An entirely unrecorded printing of three additional verses, celebrations of the naval prowess and ultimate sacrifice of Admiral Lord Nelson 'Who dar'd to die to keep us free', to the popular British national air Rule Britannia, first performed as part of Thomas Arne's Alfred, a Masque first performed at Cliveden in 1740, to celebrate the anniversary of the accession of King George II.

Collections of naval songs and periodicals contemporary to Nelson's death at Trafalgar reveal that the first two these three verses (incipit: 'The pride, the glory of our state' and 'Rest, rest, in peace bright honours son') were composed by Mr Male, and delivered on stage at the Drury Lane Theatre by 'Messrs Dignum and Gibbon'. The third (incipit: 'Again the loud ton'd trumpet of fame') was apparently composed by 'Mr Ashley, of Bath' and performed by the noted tenor Charles Incledon at the Covent Garden Theatre.

We can find no separately printed songster edition of these patriotic verses in COPAC or OCLC.

A well preserved, finely bound royal copy, of this 1816 army list. Containing the names of all Royal Marine officers, the majority veterans of the Napoleonic Wars.

William Henry (1765-1837), later William IV, King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. At thirteen he was sent into the Royal Navy, serving in British North America and the Caribbean. In 1798 he was made an admiral, but the rank was purely nominal. Despite repeated petitions, he was never given a command throughout the Napoleonic Wars. In 1811, he was appointed to the honorary position of Admiral of the Fleet. He would later come to be dubbed the 'sailor king'.

25) [ROYAL NAVY]. Standing orders. Channel squadron. 1884.
[London]. [Printed by Eyre and Spottiswoode...For Her Majesty's Stationary Office, [1884].

Folio. 80pp. With numerous interleaved and pasted in manuscript additions (and one manuscript addition in some form of reproduction - perhaps by lithography?). Original publisher's blue cloth, lettered in gilt to spine. Rubbed to extremities, marked to boards, some marking, staining and creasing to text, endpapers. Inscribed 'No. 60' to FEP and 'Capt. Britten. Private' to FFEP.

Printed in July 1884, these Standing Orders for the Channel Squadron of the Royal Navy were issued in very limited numbers; the printing code notes just 65 copies of this work. They would, presumably, only have been issued to the Captains of the ships forming the Squadron protecting the home waters of the English Channel, and the respective responsible naval officers at ports and at the Admiralty.

This copy, numbered as 60, would have been used by Captain Richard Frederick Britten (1843-1910), who commanded the Ironclad HMS Minotaur between March 10th 1884 and July 27th 1885, as she operated with the Evolutionary Squadron.

COPAC and OCLC together locate just two copies in institutional libraries, at the NMM and Plymouth.

SIR JAMES SAUMAREZ' VICTORY.

Lloyd's Coffee-House, February 17, 1804.

At a Meeting of the Committee appointed to manage the Subscription raised for the Benefit of the Wounded, and the Families and Relatives of such as were Killed, in the ever-memorable Actions of the 6th and 13th of JULY, 1801, off ALGESSIRAS,

JOHN JULIUS ANGERSTEIN, Esq. in the Chair,

Resolved,

That the Families or next of Kin to the following Killed Officers, Seamen, and Marines, in those memorable Actions, be desired to send Mr White, the Secretary, at this House, an Account, in Writing, of their Consanguinity or Relationship to the deceased; together with a Statement of the Number and Situation of their Families; the same to be attested by the Minister and Churchwardens, or the Chief Magistrates, of the Places to which they respectively belong, in order that this Committee may be enabled to transmit to them, free of Expense, such Gratuities as may be found expedient, without the Necessity of an Agent or of the Parties coming to Town.

Resolved,

That the following Wounded Officers, Seamen, and Marines, do also transmit to Mr White an Account of the Nature and Condition of their Wounds, and the Name of the Ship in which they so gallantly served, attested by their present Commanding Officers, or the Ministers and Churchwardens of the Parishes to which they respectively belong, that this Committee may take their Cases into Consideration, and grant them such Gratuities as may be deemed expedient.

J. J. ANGERSTEIN, Chairman.

Steel's navy list for 1804, bound with a register of officers, seamen, and marines killed and wounded in action during the battles of Algeciras (1801) under the command of Sir James Saumarez (1757-1836), compiled by a committee appointed to manage the subscription raised for the benefit of their families.

The List of the Royal Navy was produced monthly by David Steel (1763-1803), nautical bookseller extraordinaire, and included intelligence on the most recent ships lost and captured. Relatively ephemeral in nature, few have survived. Steel was the author of The Shipmaster's Assistant and Owner's Manual (London, 1788) and assisted his father, also a bookseller, in the compilation of The Elements and Practice of Rigging and Seamanship (London, 1794).

Manuscript on paper. [22] leaves. Stitched, as issued. Old central vertical fold, occasional spotting. Two small sketches of vessels to verso of penultimate leaf.

An early nineteenth-century manuscript register of sailors serving aboard a frustratingly unidentified vessel, including; boatswains, forecastlemen, foretopmen, misentopmen, the captains of the mast, afterguard, gunners, carpenters, and marines. There is mention of a Lieutenant Ormond, this is potentially Francis Ormond, made Lieutenant on 3rd December 1810, and appointed to the frigate Endymion in 1813 off the North coast of America. During the War of 1812, he commanded a division of boats, under the orders of Captain Robert Barrie, an expedition up the Penobscot river, Maine, to capture American territory, culminating in the Battle of Hampden. He served under the same officer in the action which led to the capture of the American frigate President, in January of 1815; and was second lieutenant of the Impregnable at the Battle of Algiers in 1816. The presence of Ormond's name in the manuscript under the heading of '2 division', would suggest that the list was compiled in conjunction with the actions at Maine in 1814.

30) [ROYAL NAVY]. Steel's original and correct List of the Royal Navy...

London. Printed [by C. and W. Galabin] for P. Steel, October, 1805.

12mo. 56pp. Modern black cloth, lettered in gilt to spine. Bookplate of D. M. Fyffe to FEP, scattered spotting, margins shaved - clipping text in places, without loss of sense.

The List of the Royal Navy was produced monthly by David Steel (1763-1803), nautical bookseller extraordinaire, and included intelligence on the most recent ships lost and captured. Relatively ephemeral in nature, few have survived. Steel was the author of The Shipmaster's Assistant and Owner's Manual (London, 1788) and assisted his father, also a bookseller, in the compilation of The Elements and Practice of Rigging and Seamanship (London, 1794). Upon Steel's death, his wife Penelope continued to manage the business until the firm went bankrupt in 1819.

This edition, printed on the eve of the Battle of Trafalgar, records Vice-Admiral Lord Viscount Nelson, Rear-Admiral George Murray and Captain T. M. Hardy, as commanders of H.M.S. Victory.

31) [ROYAL NAVY]. Steel's original and correct List of the Royal Navy...

London. Printed, for P. Mason, by E. Hildyard, 1 October, 1808.

12mo. 52pp. Modern black cloth boards, lettered in gilt to spine. Bookplate of D. M. Fyffe to FEP, head of text-block shaved with loss to first word of title and running-titles throughout.

The List of the Royal Navy was produced monthly by David Steel (1763-1803), nautical bookseller extraordinaire, and included intelligence on the most recent ships lost and captured. Relatively ephemeral in nature, few have survived. Steel was the author of The Shipmaster's Assistant and Owner's Manual (London, 1788) and assisted his father, also a bookseller, in the compilation of The Elements and Practice of Rigging and Seamanship (London, 1794). Upon Steel's death, his wife Penelope continued to manage the business until the firm went bankrupt in 1819.

This edition, printed in the early stages of the Peninsular War, a time of British naval dominance, notably records Captain Michael Seymour's command of the HMS Amythyst, the vessel which would be central to the action of 10 November 1808, which saw French forces once more defeated at sea.

37) [SONGS]. Ye mariners of england...
[s.i.]. [s.n.], [s.d., c. 1840?].

Dimensions 200 x 250 mm. Single sheet, printed on one aide only.
Printed in two columns. Numbered at the foot '[song 219.]' Three small burn-marks, else clean and crisp.

The second located copy of a nineteenth-century broadside featuring poet Thomas Campbell's (1777-1844) popular nautical ballad 'Ye Mariners of England', celebrating the strength of the Royal Navy:

"The spirit of your fathers
Shall start from every wave;
For the deck it was their field of same,
And ocean was their grave.
Where Blake and mighty Nelson fell,
Your manly hearts shall glow,
As ye sweep through the deep,
While the stormy tempests blow;
While the battle rages loud and long,
And the stormy tempests blow.'

The verse was first composed in 1800 and first printed in the Morning Chronicle in January, 1801; the reference to the death of Nelson being a later insertion.

OCLC records a single copy, at California; COPAC adds no further.

39) STILLINGFLEET, Rev. James. National gratitude, enforced in a sermon, preached in the cathedral church of worcester, On Thursday, Nov. 29, 1798, the day appointed for a general thanksgiving to almighty god, as for other signal interpositions of his good providence, so more particularly for the great blessing vouchsafed to his majesty's arms in the complete victory obtained over the french fleet, by the ships under the command of admiral lord nelson, On the First of August, off the mouth of the Nile.
Worcester. Printed and sold by T. Holl, 1798. First edition.

8vo. [2], 37pp, [1]. With a half-title. Modern navy calf-baked marbled paper boards, ruled and lettered in gilt. Bookplate of Norfolk-based amateur historian, and inaugural member of the Nelson Society, Ron Charles Fiske of FEP, marginal worm-tracks.

A Worcester-printed sermon preached by Church of England clergyman James Stillingfleet (bap. 1729, d. 1817). Owing to Nelson's first dispatches being intercepted, confirmation of the British victory in the first days of August 1798 - which represented one of the most significant reversals of fortune in the naval Age of Sail, securing supremacy of the Mediterranean for the Royal Navy - did not reach England until 2nd October. Jubilant celebrations erupted around the country. Stillingfleet compared the victory to God's intervention on behalf of the Israelites in Egypt, and was effusive in his praise for the conduct of the Royal Navy: 'A General of most ambitious and intrepid Spirit...with a large Army under his Command, flushed with success in former repeated Victories, is suffered under the direction of a wise and superintending Providence, to make good his landing at Alexandria...In this critical moment, while the ships which conveyed this Army to the Coast of Egypt remained yet in a Bay near the mouth of the Nile, our Gallant English Admiral arrived with the Squadron under his Command. At this time it may with truth be said that the LORD God of Israel of old, now the God of Christians, interposed in a most wonderful manner our deliverance...Perhaps there never was a more decisive, nor a more brilliant victory obtained, which reflected greater honour upon the skill and bravery of the British Navy.'

MARITIME RIGHTS IN WAR

43) WARD, Robert. A treatise of the relative rights and duties of belligerent and neutral powers, in maritime affairs: in which the principles of armed neutralities, and the opinions of hubner and schlegel are fully discussed. London. Printed for J. Butterworth, 1801. First edition.

8vo. xv, [1], 172pp, [2]. With a terminal advertisement leaf. Uncut in original publisher's two-tone paper boards. Extremities worn and marked, later naive paper repairs to head of spine. Early ink ownership inscription to head of half-title, spotted.

The first edition of lawyer Robert Plumer Ward's (1765-1846) defence of the rights of belligerents in maritime engagements, produced at the request of Foreign Secretary, Lord Grenville, following the rise of the Second League of Armed Neutrality; a coalition of nations formed with the intention to protect neutral shipping against the Royal Navy's wartime policy of unlimited search of neutral shipping for French contraband, in an attempt to cut off military supplies and other trade to the First French Republic.

A supplement, concerning the funeral procession of Horatio Nelson, to Joshua White's authoritative biography of the Admiral, first published in 1806.

Fiske's notes suggest that this was a separately issued variant: 'By virtue of gathering B2 on p.[v] and the printing of the page no. "6" I suspect this is the separately issued version of the supplement. In the main work where it appears as a supplement p[v] is B3 and there is no page no on p[6].'
